

Country Profile: SOUTH AFRICA

South Africa is in its 13th year of democracy after decades of apartheid.

HISTORY

Until 1994 South Africa was ruled by a white minority government with it taking activists most of the last century before they succeeded in their fight to get rid of apartheid and extend democracy to the rest of the population. The white government which came to power in 1948 enforced a separation of races with its policy called apartheid. It dictated that black and white communities should live in separate areas, travel in different buses and stand in their own queues. The government introduced grand social engineering schemes such as the forced resettlement of hundreds of thousands of people. It poisoned and bombed opponents and encouraged trouble in neighbouring countries.

The apartheid government eventually negotiated itself out of power, and the new leadership encouraged reconciliation. But the cost of the years of conflict will be paid for a long time yet. South Africa faces major problems, but having held three successful national elections as well as local polls since the end of white rule, a democratic culture appears to be taking hold, allowing people at least some say in the search for solutions.

RECENT SITUATION

South Africa has the continent's biggest economy, with strong financial and manufacturing sectors. It is a leading exporter of minerals and tourism is a key source of foreign exchange. But many South Africans remain poor and unemployment is high - a factor blamed for a wave of violent attacks against migrant workers from other African countries. Land redistribution is an ongoing issue. Most farmland is still white-owned. Having so far acquired land on a "willing buyer, willing seller" basis, officials have signalled that large-scale expropriations are on the cards. The government aims to transfer 30% of farmland to black South Africans by 2014. South Africa has the second-highest number of HIV/Aids patients in the world. Around one in seven of its citizens are infected with HIV. Free anti-retroviral drugs are available under a state-funded scheme. South Africa has become a driving force in African peace-keeping since the late 1990s. Working in tandem with Nigeria, Senegal, Algeria and Egypt, among other key African states, it has mooted initiatives aimed at addressing Africa's deadly conflicts. Its forces are involved in peace-keeping and associated duties in Burundi, DR Congo, Eritrea/Ethiopia and, more recently, in the Sudan. Apart from invigorating extant regional communities such as SADC and ECOWAS, these initiatives have led to the creation of important new potential anchors for peace and good governance, such as NEPAD and its African Peer Review Mechanism, as well as the AU and its Peace and Security Council.

*<sup>1</sup> The HDI provides a composite measure of three dimensions of human development: living a long and healthy life (measured by life expectancy), being educated (measured by adult literacy and enrolment at the primary, secondary and tertiary level) and having a decent standard of living (measured by purchasing power parity, PPP, income).

*<sup>3</sup> Rankings are out of a total of 177.
